Tip of the Month

How Do Thieves Steal your Identity?

There are many ways for thieves to steal your identity. Be aware of what you throw away in your household trash.

Dumpster divers may be able to piece together enough information from old bills, financial statements, etc. to get your name, address, account number, bank name, etc. They can then use this information to open new accounts in your name or even assume your identity entirely.

The best practice is to shred all these documents.

Sincerely,

Brian M. Connelly

Data Breach May Be in Your Trash Can

A recent survey conducted by Swingline, the iconic office product brand, found that there is a false sense of security when it comes to sensitive information in the workplace. The study found that 89% of employers use hard paper copies keeping records. Two-thirds of respondents said that shredding documents is either the most important or a very important step a company can take to protect its sensitive business information, yet 26% admitted to throwing away sensitive business information without first shredding it.

This scary statistic may indicate that employees of your business at times casually discard confidential information. For this reason, it is safest to adopt a "shred everything, all the time in the same manner policy."

It is important to remember that threats to business information are not limited to digital data. Hard paper copies of sensitive information need to be shred just as digital data needs a password, but it's a time consuming task.

Let All Points Mobile Shredding take that task off of your hands!

Anthem Breach Largest to Date - 80 Million People Affected

America's second biggest health insurer, Anthem Inc., disclosed that they experienced a data breach that affected approximately 80 million people on February 4, 2015. Anthem disclosed that the breach exposed customers and employees' names, birth dates, Social Security numbers, and addresses.

Anthem has had a history of breaches in the past. "In 2011, Anthem settled with the Attorney General's office in Indiana for $100,000 for failing to report a security breach in a timely manner, and in October 2012, settled with the California Attorney General's office for $150,000, for the same violation. Based upon their history of failures in protecting sensitive health data and in complying with the state and federal notification obligations, as well as the magnitude of this breach, it likely that they will be subject to even stronger enforcement this time around." according to Joan Antokol, Managing Partner at Park Legal LLC.

If you have questions or believe you may have been a victim of this breach, visit www.Anthemfacts.org for more information.
