Paper Documents Are Your Greatest Risk

The American Journal of Managed Care reported that the most common culprit of data breaches are actual paper records and film.

Researchers looked at the data breaches reported to the HHS Office of Civil Rights since 2009. Over one third of the breaches involved hospitals.

Paper and film records made up 60% of the breaches reported. The study concluded that all businesses that have confidential information, especially health-care related business, should perform regular audits and contract with a document shredding company that performs on-site document shredding as part of their "regular and ordinary course of business." It's important to ensure your shredding company is NAID AAA Certified, the highest designation in the industry which imposes announced and unannounced audits on its members.
